PLENARY INDULGENCE—The faithful may obtain a plenary indulgence—a remission before God of the temporal punishment for a previously forgiven sin—by visiting a minor basilica. To obtain a plenary indulgence during a pilgrimage to a basilica, one must participate in any sacred rite or recite the Lord’s Prayer or the profession of faith while there, then go to Confession and Communion, and pray for the intention of the pope. ~ taken from The Register, Salina Diocese newspaper

“Jesus said to them, ‘Come after me, and I will make you fishers of men.’”

Mark 1:14-20

Fishers of Men

G.K. Chesterton once remarked that he was blessed with a faith so secure that he believed all the gospel miracles despite the fact that they were told to us by fishermen. Despite the legendary mendacity of fishermen, there are helpful reflections on why Christ, in today's gospel, chose ordinary fishermen to be "fishers of men."

In gospel times, fishermen were rugged, uneducated laborers with few social graces and fewer communication skills. There were many priests, rabbis and elders trained in religious matters, yet Christ by-passed those well qualified candidates and chose twelve simple fishermen.

Why? Perhaps the fishermen had no preconceived ideas about the Messiah, unlike the rabbis and priests who thought they knew everything about the promised Savior. Their lack of religious training and communication skills illustrates that the spreading of the gospel does not depend upon their ingenuity or talents, but on the grace of God acting through them. The spread of Christianity has defied all the odds. It still amazes historians.

There is also the analogy between fishing and faith. Landing fish and leading people to God follow similar patterns. The fish are hidden from view, as is the human soul; the net must be cast to gather the fish, as the word of God must be spread to the people. The fish are lured with bait, as the truth of the gospel attracts the spiritually hungry.

There are lessons here for modern Christians. Many today have a religious inferiority complex, a low religious self-esteem. Too many sell themselves short spiritually. They feel that their lack of formal religious training disqualifies them from engaging their faith more seriously, both in developing their own faith and in using their gift of faith in service of others. Consequently, many enriching opportunities are lost: lay ministries, Bible study, renewal programs, and parish activities. The selection of apostles from common fishermen reminds us that Christian ministry, as well as Christian life, is for all the baptized.

Consider this interesting hypothesis: if Christ came again to choose anew his apostles, whom would he select? If today's gospel is any indication, the most likely candidate would not be a bishop nor a priest nor a deacon, but you. In a very real sense, every baptized Christian is an apostle.

You were chosen not only to live the gospel, but also to offer it to others in the ordinary circumstances of daily life. You are called to be a fisher of souls. Not a stereotypical fisherman who tells tall tales, but one who lives and speaks the truth of the gospel.

... and mirth

Fishing is the fine art of drowning worms.
